

Dear Wi-Fi Users,

The Blue Line team would like to thank you for your feedback regarding Microsoft Hohm and Google PowerMeter. Your comments help to insure the PowerCost Monitor and Wi-Fi Gateway allow you to make your contribution to energy conservation.

Google PowerMeter has recently announced that they are exiting the energy monitoring category. We are appreciative of the efforts of Google to help pioneer and lend credibility to this category. Current users will remain live until the fall and will have a period of time to determine where they want to transition. You will also have the opportunity to retain/download all of your historical data. We encourage you to log on to the FAQ's section of our website for further information or email us at support@bluelineinnovations.com

In preparation of this change, our team would like to remind you how easy it is to switch dashboards from Google PowerMeter to Microsoft Hohm. We are committed to offering you a reliable product that will continue to work and a choice to switch here anytime.

Although we are disappointed to hear the news about Google, in the spirit of optimism and opportunity we would like to share some Good News!

Coming Soon!

At the end of the month, we will be announcing a new relationship with our newest partner and they will be providing a Free Energy Manager to home owners via mobile devices: iPhone/iPad/iTouch or Android supported. They will be providing as part of their services: real time insight, choice and control over your personal energy use and helping you save money when combined with our WiFi Gateway. This is very exciting news for existing customers of our PowerCost Monitor™ & WiFi Gateway and will surely attract new customers as they learn about the features and benefits of this new relationship.

- What will our New Partner bring to our home owners:
 - Energy Use Monitoring
 - Set Budgets and Get Recommendations
 - See Energy Usage Against Relevant Benchmarks
 - Compete Against Friends

This is exciting news and we will share the full announcement at the end of the month.

As we embrace this change, we are excited to move toward the next generation of energy efficiency and monitoring and control solutions for homes, appliances and devices. The Blue Line Team is committed to offering you high quality products and services so you can better manage your home energy use.

If you have any questions or comments regarding Google's announcement, please email us at support@bluelineinnovations.com.

Please "like" us on Facebook or follow us on twitter @PowerCost to stay up to date, as Blue Line will have exciting announcements regarding other new partnerships throughout the summer! We appreciate your understanding as we move forward.

Sincerely,

The Blue Line Team