

Help to Keep Track of Electricity Use (VOCM)

VOCM

March 7, 2007

There's a way to help keep those electricity costs in check. Many people have complained about high bills this winter, including those with new digital meters which Newfoundland Power says more accurately calculate power usage. The PowerCost Monitor, developed by Blue Line Innovations in St. John's, allows homeowners to see exactly how much electricity they are using. Spokesperson James McMillan says the monitor costs about 150 dollars.